Led the migration of a national multi-brand web estate from legacy Sitecore to a headless CMS architecture on Storyblok, holding end-to-end ownership across scoping, partner delivery, cutover and ongoing roadmap. Platform ownership and CMS transformation

- Owned the organisation's marketing web estate end to end, spanning the corporate site and a portfolio of project and community sites, with accountability for architecture, roadmap, delivery, governance and ongoing evolution.
- Led the transition from legacy Sitecore to a headless CMS architecture on Storyblok, covering platform evaluation, business case, content modelling, scoped delivery, cutover planning and decommissioning of the legacy stack.
- Served as the single technical intake point for every initiative requiring platform or CMS change, working with design and engineering to assess feasibility, translate requests into scoped and estimated work, and prioritise against business strategy and platform health.
- Managed platform vendors and delivery partners end to end, including evaluation, commercial negotiation, contract renewals and ongoing performance management.
- Aligned the web platform with the wider technology stack, covering CRM, marketing automation, analytics, tag management and lead routing.

Squad delivery and stakeholder communication

- Ran the delivery rhythm across internal team and external development partners: backlog triage, sprint prioritisation, release planning and day-to-day blocker removal to hold velocity.
- Balanced business-as-usual requests from marketing and sales against platform initiatives the team originated from analytics and commercial opportunity.
- Produced the documentation the business ran on: cutover plans, stakeholder registers, release notes and roadmap updates.
- Reported platform status, trade-offs and risk to executive leadership in plain language, including capital requests and post-launch performance reviews.

Optimisation and outcomes

- Reduced publishing cycles from weeks to days by redesigning workflows, approval paths and ownership, and enabled marketing teams to self-publish safely inside a governed model.
- Established governance covering content standards, WCAG accessibility, SEO and brand consistency across every property on the platform.
- Ran post-launch analysis using analytics, heatmapping and A/B testing to improve enquiry conversion.
- Built and led a multidisciplinary team across UX, design, content and digital marketing, materially reducing external agency dependency and improving speed to market.
- Recognition included a Brandie Award for Best Community Branding and Best Property Website at the International Property Awards.
